TV EXPLOSION

Stuck in Chicago during Comic-Con?

Never fear, superfans! RedEye's TV guru, Curt Wagner, is making the rounds at the San Diego-based geek fest, and he's doing everything he can to get you in on the action. Wagner's posting pics to his blog and filing reports throughout the festivities. On Thursday, he put out a call for questions from readers that he can pose to celebs at the annual pop culture spectacular.

And if that doesn't strike your fancy, he's also running a reality TV contest.

Submit a video for your own spoof to redeyechicago.com/showpatrol and our guy in San Diego just might post it.

Happy surfing!

LOVE CONNECTION

Single in the city?

RedEye wants to score you a date. If you are brave enough to submit yourself to the judgmental eyes of RedEye readers, here's how to do it:

Visit the RedEye blog at redeyechicago.com/hookup and fill out a dater profile. Send an e-mail to redeyetalk@gmail.com with the words "RedEye Vibes" in the subject line—and include a photograph that we can publish.

We'll pick the most eligible bachelors and bachelorettes to be featured online and in the paper. What do you have to lose?

Buehrle edition

Sox ace pitches way into history

As you no doubt already know, Mark Buehrle is Mr. Baseball this week. The Sox pitcher threw the 18th perfect game in major-league history Thursday as he befuddled the Tampa Bay Rays at the Cell.

"I never thought I'd throw a no-hitter, never thought I'd throw a perfect game and I never thought I'd hit a home run," Buehrle told the Tribune. "Never say never in this game because crazy stuff can happen."

At any rate, the event was a super huge deal. RedEye even had the perfect soundtrack to mark the occasion ... until we realized what a downer songs titled "Perfect" actually are.

REDEYE'S REJECTED 'PERFECT' PLAYLIST

Mmm or eew?

All this talk of grilling got RedEye starving. Being on the subject of no-meat treats, we decided to perform a (highly unscientific) taste test. Seventeen staffers whose experience with meat ranges from "Never had it before in my life" to "Everything tastes better with bacon" tried out five random meatless links. Here now, their gut reactions. Products purchased at Whole Foods in Lakeview.

WHERE'S THE BEEF?

Grilling out doesn't always mean eating meat. Take a walk on the greener side of life and try some of these vegetarian alternatives

By Chelsea Schneider

FOR REDEYE

Beef. It's not what's for dinner.

July might call to mind those hazy Saturdays spent at meat-filled backyard barbecues, but Chicago has more to offer than its beefy reputation would have you believe. Take the Taste of Chicago, one of the meat-friendliest fests of the summer: This year, the Grant Park crowd-a-thon offered more for veg-heads than just the old corn-on-the-cob standby—from pad Thai noodles to those sweet plantain wedges called Maduros. Next month, the meat-free can descend on Naperville for Veggie Fest, which features 100 food vendors, events and exhibitions.

But you don't have to leave home to get the best veggies have to offer. Consider meat-free grilling, which can be healthier for you anyway.

With less fat and more fiber than their beefy counterparts, fake meats can be better for you, nutrition experts say.

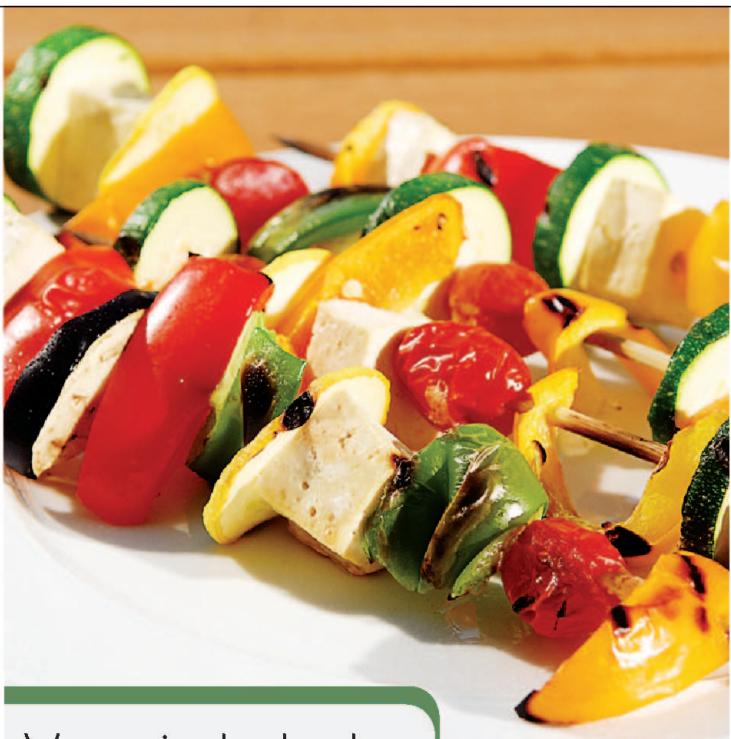

"Veggie burgers end up being lower in calories and lower in fat than traditional burgers," Chicago-based registered dietitian Barbara Fine told RedEye. But the health quotient can change depending on what you pile on. Condiments, sauces and cheeses increase the calories.

Prepackaged veggie burgers also are higher in salt, but they tend to have fewer calories than homemade burgers because their ingredients and sizes are controlled, Fine says.

She recommends trying several different varieties of veggie burgers and other fake meats, such as veggie hot dogs and bratwurst, before ruling them out because different brands, depending on ingredients, can taste really different.

"The general rule is, the more soy-based a veggie

Veggie kabobs

GOES GREAT WITH: With any veggie meal, it's important to have some sort of protein, said registered dietitian Christina Fitzgerald. She recommends having cheese or a fresh feta salad on the side.

WHAT'S IN IT: Eggplant, bell peppers, red onion, firm tofu and zucchini.

NUTRITION INFO: A slice of firm tofu has about 52 calories per serving and is low in cholesterol and a good source of protein. Vegetables are low in saturated fat, cholesterol and sodium.

WHAT THE PRO SAYS: "Tofu, by itself, is from a plant ... It's good protein. It's going to be potentially a lot lower in calories than traditional meats unless if you're deep frying it quite a bit," said registered dietitian Barbara Fine.

HOW TO MAKE IT: Place veggies and tofu in a large mixing bowl and drizzle with olive oil. Then alternate veggies and tofu on skewers. Grill on medium to high heat for eight to 10 minutes.

burger, the more hamburger-like in texture and flavor [it is]," said registered dietitian Bridget Feeny, who runs a private practice in Chicago and the suburbs. "The more grains, the less similar. It is not less tasty, just less similar to a hamburger."

The veggie burger name itself can be a misnomer. Veggie burgers aren't all vegetable. Some include more soy protein than actual veggies. And recipes also can include eggs, black beans and oatmeal.

"You would think a lot of them are made out of veggies," said Dawn Jackson Blatner, a registered dietitian who has studied the nutritional values of veggie burgers and hot dogs for the American Dietetic Association. But veggie burgers with more than 10 grams of protein are made of more soy protein and wheat gluten than real veggies or whole grains, Blatner says.

Burgers with less than 10 grams of protein can contain veggies such as mushrooms, onions and bell peppers, along with whole grains.

Portobello mushroom burgers

GOES GREAT WITH: Rice and beans are healthy side dishes.

WHAT'S IN IT: Thick slice of portobello mushroom, grilled onions and roasted peppers.

NUTRITION INFO: A grilled portobello mushroom has an average of 42 calories per serving (1 cup, sliced). The mushroom also is low in sodium, saturated fat and a good source for protein.

WHAT THE PRO SAYS: Portobello mushroom

Veggie fajitas

GOES GREAT WITH: Chicago Diner executive chef Kim Gracen recommends lining the tortilla with quinoa, which adds protein to the dish.

WHAT'S IN IT: Onions, peppers, yellow squash, zucchini, tortilla and lime, quinoa or beans.

NUTRITION INFO: Cooked quinoa has about 34 calories per ounce, with five calories from fat. The grain is low in cholesterol and sodium.

WHAT THE PRO SAYS: Spreading quinoa or beans on the tortillas will add protein to the fajitas.

HOW TO MAKE IT: Thickly cut veggies, so tongs are easy to use. Squeeze lime on them. Grill them on medium to high heat, then wrap the veggies in a tortilla.

Regardless of ingredients, veggie burgers shouldn't be a trade-in for vegetables at a barbecue. At least half of the grill should be reserved for vegetables, Blatner says.

Artichokes, asparagus, garlic, mushrooms and sweet potatoes grill well whole. And don't be afraid to throw fruit on the grill. "Grilled peaches, pineapple and bananas are fantastic and a way to round out a meal," Blatner said. "Whenever you grill or heat fruit, it makes it even sweeter. The natural juices and flavors come out even more."

CHELSEA SCHNEIDER IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

burgers are comparable in protein to veggie burgers.

"You can grill them like a normal burger," Fitzgerald said. "It's almost like a beef burger right off the grill."

HOW TO MAKE IT: Slice mushroom thickly. Marinate in vinegar with rosemary or Italian dressing. Grill on medium heat and top with grilled onions or roasted peppers.

Metromix's Top 5 picks for meatless-meat

1 CHICAGO POLISH

Lake Side Cafe, 1418 W. Howard St.
773-262-9503

You can take the meat out of a Polish, but at Lake Side, you can't take the Polish out of the sausage. The traditionally dressed vegan Polish ($9) is topped with sauerkraut, yellow mustard and house-made relish and comes with your choice of coleslaw, salad or blue corn chips.

2 BBQ TWIST

Soul Vegetarian East Restaurant,
205 E. 75th St. 773-224-0104

You might've seen this meatless fave on a stick at Taste of Chicago, but at its Chatham home base, the saucy specialty comes sans-stick three ways: as a sandwich ($6), a side ($8) or a platter with fries ($10).

3 SLIDERS

Mana, 1742 W. Division St. 773-342-1742

Nothing says snack food like burger sliders, and Mana does theirs up with brown rice and mushrooms ($3.50 apiece), grilled with a touch of olive oil and served with house-made pickled cucumbers.

4 UNCHICKEN DRUMSTICKS

Alice & Friends Vegetarian Cafe,
5812 N. Broadway. 773-275-8797

Skip the grill and head to this Edgewater pan-Asian spot for "drumsticks" of meatless chicken ($4.25 for two) dipped in barbecue sauce and served with cucumbers, carrots and alfalfa sprouts.

5 CHORIZO

Handlebar, 2311 W. North Ave.
773-384-9546

Got a hankering for nachos? Order up this beer-friendly bar's chorizo and black bean-topped nachos ($9.75), a mess of chips topped with beans, sour cream, pico de gallo and a meatless version of the spicy sausage.

Hood: Grant Park Museums

Grab your pals, pack a picnic and make a night of the city's annual waterside spectacle that is Venetian Night (Monroe Harbor, 100 S. Lake Shore Drive. 312-744-3315). One of the longest-running events in town, this year's boat parade/fireworks display goes celeb-chic thanks to 2009's Hollywood on the Lake theme. Oohh and ahh at about 25 prettied-up vessels as they make their way along the lakefront from Shedd Aquarium to the Chicago Yacht Club (8 p.m.), then relax during fireworks (9 p.m.) set to classical tunes from old-Hollywood flicks. For your pre-parade pleasure, motocross star Ronnie Renner (interview on page 21) jumpstarts festivities with a Guinness World Record attempt to jump higher than 59 feet, 2 inches in Butler Field (100 S. ### Oodles of local music

Hood: Wicker Park

There are plenty of reasons to head to Wicker Park Fest 2009 (Milwaukee Avenue between North Avenue and Wood Street), not the least of which is a solid lineup of neighborhood eats and art vendors. But if there's one thing the annual fest prides itself on, it's local tunes. This year, three stages host more than 44 bands, many of which are based in Chicago and the Midwest.

Don't miss the power-pop sensibilities of Chi-based rockers Treaty of Paris (8 p.m. Saturday, Center Stage) or the indie strains of Indiana's Margot & The Nuclear So and So's (7:55 p.m. Saturday, North Stage). Only have time for one? Park it at Center Stage at 8 p.m. Sunday for Chicago's pop-rockin' wonders Smoking Popes.

Hood: Near North Side

Want to shake up your bookcase with a few choice summer reads and a biography or two to impress the houseguests? Thousands of books (more than 100,000, actually) in 60 categories await your perusal at the Newberry Library's 25th annual book fair (60 W. Walton St. 312-255-3510). And at two bucks a pop, they're totally in your price range.

But that's not all. Stretch your novel-browsing muscles with free yoga at 9 a.m. Saturday in Washington Square Park (375 W. Elm St.), about a mile from the library.

Stick around outside Newberry at noon Saturday for a reading and book signing by Alex Kotlowitz, author of bestselling book, "There Are No Children Here," followed by a re-enactment of the famous 1859 debate between Abraham Lincoln and Stephen Douglas (psst: "Lincoln" will be on hand after the debate for photos). # Traffic Jam

By Matt McGuire

The scene: "This is not my first time around the block," Jerry Suqi tells us. "But I've never experienced this before."

Suqi is talking about last weekend's grand opening of Jam, his new Ukrainian Village breakfast-and-lunch spot, which was so flooded with the curious and hungry on its second day that it had to close early after running out of food.

Turns out the restaurant's name is more than a cute reference to breakfast preserves. It could just as easily describe the neighborhood's response to his shabby-chic, 34-seat spot, which has equally enough eccentricities and polish to keep people coming back.

After opening (and closing) two popular downtown nightclubs — Sugar and La Pomme Rouge — Suqi has dealt with his fair share of crowds. He even had an opening-night line at his first full-fledged restaurant, Chickpea, a casual West Town spot that serves up Middle Eastern food with a side of hipster.

Yet the response to Jam has been intense, and Suqi is now better prepared. Perhaps the neighbors were missing Dodo, the popular breakfast-and-lunch spot that previously occupied the space. (Dodo has plans to reopen near Fulton and Damen Avenues this year.) Or maybe word got out that malted custard French toast was on the menu ($10).

The cuisine: Chef Jeffrey Mauro and sous chef Mike Noll have spent time in some impressive Chicago kitchens, including Charlie Trotter's, North Pond and Schwa, so don't be surprised when you taste some truffled pecorino with your steak and eggs ($12).

Also, don't bother wearing your brunch pants with the extra leeway, because the duo won't stuff you to discomfort. They will, however, make you a fluffy snow-white Breakfast Terrine ($9, essentially an egg-white omelet) folded around aged goat cheese and plate it artfully with a fuchsia smear of roasted beet puree and a shock of watercress. It's not particularly indulgent, but the flavor mix is carefully considered and the portion sensible.

There's also a line-up of sandwiches and salads for the lunch crowd, including a vegetable panini, turkey club and a Jamburger, the restaurant's double patty burger, topped with an egg and butterkase cheese — just the sort of thing that could create lines of

Watchmen

Director's cut on Blu-ray

Zack Snyder's long-awaited adaptation of the groundbreaking graphic novel excises much of the striking peripheral material that made the genre-smashing comic by Alan Moore and Dave Gibbons so deeply layered and compelling. But it still follows the plot, almost panel by panel.

Snyder ("300," "Dawn of the Dead") uses a spectacular series of opening credits to set the stage. We witness the evolution of the superheroes, from the Minutemen circa World War II to the more modern Watchmen to Bob Dylan's "The Times They Are A-Changin'." The Watchmen's best days are behind them, though, since Richard Nixon, president in 1985 when the story is set, won the Vietnam War with the help of big, blue superhero Dr. Manhattan (Billy Crudup) and his grinning, gun-toting amoral sidekick The Comedian (Jeffrey Dean Morgan).

But despite the rising threat of nuclear holocaust, Congress has outlawed superheroes, so the former masks tend to keep a low profile. One exception is Ozymandias (Matthew Goode), a flashy-dressing entrepreneur who seems bent on cashing in on every version of himself as action-hero figure. But then The Comedian is murdered, and the sociopathic Rorschach (Jackie Earle Haley) steps up to investigate whether some villain is knocking off superheroes with a big End Times endgame in mind. MCT

LOVE IT

TV

'Being Human'

8 p.m. Saturday, BBC America

A ghost, a werewolf and a vampire move in together in an attempt to live normal lives. Hilarity ensues, right? Don't let the premise fool you. This bloody, dark and engaging tale is not a monster mash à la "The Munsters." The supernatural situation of werewolf George (excellent Russell Tovey), vampire Mitchell (Aidan Turner) and ghost Annie (Lenora Crichlow) is a metaphor for the lives of people who cope with issues, addictions or afflictions that make them feel different, separate and lonely.

DVD AND BLU-RAY

Coraline

The best children's stories aren't afraid of the dark. Henry Selick's adaptation of Neil Gaiman's novel is essentially a horror movie for kids, but it is so gentle, funny and whimsical that even in its darkest moments, it never forgets its target audience. Selick is the only animator left in Hollywood still making full-length stop-motion films, and he's so good at his craft that the film is worth seeing just for its visuals.

Battlefield

Jordin Sparks

Sure, Jordin Sparks' sophomore album, "Battlefield" (Jive), was probably named after the overwrought title track where she sings "Get your armor!" But it really does sound like a battle brewing between two personas. On the one hand is a vaguely sweet Everygirl who sings interchangeable songs about surface-y stuff like battlefields and love-like things. On the other side is the actual 19-year-old Jordin who has actual feelings and can express them quite well, both vocally and lyrically. GLENN GAMBOA, NEWSDAY

BOOK

Kanye West Presents: Thank You and You're Welcome

Kanye West with J. Sakiya Sandifer

I don't really loathe the Kanye West presentation "Thank You And You're Welcome," but it isn't a rewarding read either. Even if you get past the notion it looks like a book built for a baby, this palm-sized advice manual doesn't exactly contain the keys to Kanye's kingdom. Instead, it contains "doh!" level insights easily found in the "Chicken Soup for the Soul" series. I'd say more, but this review might get longer than the book, so let's just end with this: No thank you, and you're not welcome. KYRA KYLES, REDEYE

TV

'The Storm'

8 p.m. Sunday and Aug. 2, NBC

TV's latest awful disaster mini-series stars James Van Der Beek as a well-intentioned scientist who comes up with weather-altering technology that's hijacked for evil purposes by his boss. Despite all the technobabble, it makes less sense than when X-Men superhero Storm conjures a scary weather system. The comically stupid subplot involves the boss' mission to kill anyone who stands in his way, and apparently the careers of co-stars. CURT WAGNER, REDEYE

Super Group

Shonen Knife

» <http://snurl.com/nkwj7>

Japanese girl-pop/punk stalwarts Shonen Knife return to U.S. shores with a new platter of tunes on Aug. 25. We've got the premiere of "Super Group" here for your listening pleasure. The women offer up catchy ditties born in the garage, but run through a bit of '60s pop gloss and riot grrl attitude. The band also will be playing a lengthy North American tour during October and November, appearing alongside Ty Segall, The Strange Boys, and JEFF The Brotherhood. SARAH ZUPKO, MCT

Mmm ... MOCKTAIL

Now that it's summer—and almost kinda hot—it's time to think about refreshing lemonades and cool cocktails. "It's also important for hosts to offer non-alcoholic options," says author Natalie Bovis-Nelsen. "It's nice to offer [guests] something in a beautiful glass, that's colorful and festive, tastes great and ultimately makes them feel included in the fun." Try this recipe. DETROIT FREE PRESS

WATERMELON COOLER

Serves: 1

Preparation time: 5 minutes

Total time: 5 minutes

You can make your own lemonade ice cubes or use regular ice cubes.

Ingredients

- » 6 leaves mint
- » ½ ounce lemon juice
- » 1 tsp. powdered sugar
- » Lemonade ice cubes
- » 4 ounces freshly juiced watermelon
- » 2 ounces lemon-lime soda
- » Watermelon wedge

Directions: In the bottom of a tall glass, muddle the mint, lemon juice and sugar. Fill with lemonade ice cubes, add watermelon juice and top with lemon-lime soda. Garnish with a watermelon wedge.

The funny flies high in 'Loop'

With a potential war (with Iraq, ostensibly) on the table, politicians, military officials and powerless underlings in America and Britain trade quips to try to figure out who believes what, who's siding with whom and how to get anything done. Stars Tom Hollander as a British cabinet minister with his foot constantly in his mouth, Peter Capaldi as a hysterically foulmouthed British communications director and James Gandolfini as a boorish American general.

The buzz: The last few years have brought plenty of Iraq-related movies but few comedies with as much zip in the script as director/co-writer Armando Iannucci's "In the Loop." The question is if anyone still wants to hear about this six years into the war and in a new, non-Bush era of American politics.

The verdict: Nearly every line is a different, potent form of B.S. in this picture, with humor so dry you better buy that large drink beforehand. With so many daggers cutting it's hard not to want more of an explanation of why officials feel the way they do about the pending war. Of course, the chaos, secrets and betrayals are the point, and the superquick "In the Loop" demonstrates wit and agility while characters move from offense to defense and back, deflecting even the most unhinged barbs with the most strategic and meaningless nonsense.

With Obama's old Senate seat up for grabs, will a minority candidate run?

Associated Press

When Illinois chooses a new senator next year, voters will decide not only who wins an election but whether the overwhelmingly white U.S. Senate loses some of its diversity.

The seat up for grabs has produced three of the nation's four black senators in modern history. It paved the way for Barack Obama to be America's first black president. Roland Burris, the Senate's only black member, now holds it.

Without an incumbent or Democratic heir apparent, the race is wide open. So far, most of the candidates are white. That leaves open the possibility that the chamber could have no black members in 2011, even though efforts are under way to find a black candidate in Illinois.

"When you make progress, you don't want to go backward. You don't want to lose opportunities that you have created," said U.S. Rep. Danny Davis, a black congressman from Chicago.

Among the blacks now running for Senate are Republican Ryan Frazier, a city council member in Aurora, Colo., and U.S. Rep. Kendrick Meek of Miami, a Democrat. The race in Illinois is still unfolding, but so far, no major black candidate has emerged.

Burris said he won't seek a full term because of fundraising problems stemming from his links to disgraced former Gov. Rod Blagojevich. The ousted governor was charged with trying to sell the seat for personal and political gain and despite his arrest, went ahead and appointed Burris to the post last December.

Senate leaders initially refused to accept Burris' appointment, but they changed course amid growing complaints about denying access to the Senate's only black member. When Burris decided not to vie for the seat, it raised the question whether there would be a high-profile black candidate in the contest.

"This is no question that diversity in the U.S. Senate is lacking," said U.S. Rep. Barbara Lee, a Democrat from California who heads the Congressional Black Caucus, in an e-mail statement. "It is up to the people of Illinois to decide who represents them."

From underweight to obese

Los Angeles Times

It's hard to believe, but being underweight used to be a considerable U.S. health problem.

In the years from 1966 to 1970, 5.8 percent of children ages 6 to 11 and 4.6 percent of children ages 12 to 19 were underweight. From 1960 to 1962, 5.7 percent of people ages 20 to 39 were underweight.

How times have changed.

Today, people who are underweight are most likely those who have underlying medical conditions, according to data from the National Center for Health Statistics.

The rates of people of all ages who are underweight have declined significantly.

Although some people may still be underweight because of malnutrition, many more become overweight as a consequence of eating a poor diet based on processed foods and saturated fat with little fruit, vegetables and lean meat and fish.

Panel: Don't smoke 'em if you got 'em

MCT

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. The U.S. military's long, storied love affair with tobacco may be doomed.

The Pentagon, which actively promoted smoking during the two world wars and still subsidizes tobacco at PXs and commissaries, is considering a ban.

That's one recommendation from a panel led by a former dean of the School of Medicine at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill that was asked by the Department of Defense and the Department of Veterans Affairs how to reduce tobacco use in the military.

If Secretary of Defense Robert Gates accepts the suggestions, it would be a historic about-face for the likes of Camp Lejeune and Ft. Bragg, where tens of thousands of young men and women learned to smoke amid a culture that regarded cigarettes as much a part of being a soldier or Marine as carrying a rifle.

"It's all I see on the bases," said Staff Sgt. Maritza Hunt, a squad leader at Ft. Bragg.

Hunt, although not a smoker, was skeptical of how successful efforts to curb tobacco use would be.

"You have colonels and generals and all kinds of people who smoke," she said.

The military could end tobacco use within 20 years by gradually refusing entry to users, said Stuart Bondurant, dean emeritus of the School of Medicine at UNC-Chapel Hill.

"If the services take the full 20 years, practically everyone now in the military would be retired," he said.

She would never admit it, but Tracy is a closet Sox fan. Or is it a closet Soxman fan? Sign up for weekend Five on Five at redeyechicago.com/facebookfives.

What: Red Bull High Rise, where Ronnie Renner is attempting to break the world record for biggest air out of a quarter pipe.

Where: Butler Field prior to Chicago's annual Venetian Night.
When: 6 to 7 p.m. Saturday. How much: Free

High times

Ronnie Renner missed the memo that said bikes aren't supposed to fly.

Last year, the freestyle motocross and X-Games vet soared a jawdropping 59 feet, 2 inches in the air while on his dirt bike to break the world record for biggest air out of a quarter pipe.

This weekend, Renner is coming to Chicago to fly at skyscraping levels and attempt to break his own record.

He spoke with RedEye about the dangers and difficulties of life in the air up there. RYAN SMITH IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR

In this image, Ronnie Renner soars to more than 59 feet to break the world record for biggest air out of a quarter pipe last year at the Santa Monica Pier. Renner will try to break the record again this weekend in Chicago. RED BULL/SCOTT REGAN

You've been 60 feet in the air on your dirt bike. What's that like?

Believe it or not, I'm actually afraid of heights so I try not to look at anything except the ramps. There are three or four seconds of hang time, so it's one hell of an adrenaline rush.

How difficult and dangerous is this stunt?

I think considering few if any other guys will try something like this, it tells you how dangerous it is. There's a real fine line—too little speed and I can't make the height I want, too much and the bike gets out of control and I crash. It could be disastrous if done wrong.

Your last world record attempt was on the Santa Monica Pier. Why Chicago this time?

Chicago usually gets shafted because of the wind and weather. But I liked the idea of having the city skyline in the background and I just like the city. Chicago has the most legit, real feel about it. It's a bit more mellow than the rat race of L.A. and New York, but people really let loose in the summertime so it's perfect.

You've had a long career in motocross. How many injuries have you racked up?

Most of my bad crashes have happened not in freestyle but in races because you have to add in the element of other people around you. I've broken a couple arms, had 15 or 16 concussions, and gotten plenty of sprains, bruises and strains. I also probably got a few small breaks in my hands that I never got checked out but probably should have.

KAKURO EDITED BY MICHAEL MEPHAM

Enter a number between 1 and 9 in the empty squares. The clues are the numbers in the white circles that give the sum of the solution numbers: above the line are across clues; below the line are down clues. Thus, a clue of 3 will produce a solution of 2 and 1, and a 5 will produce 4 and 1, or 2 and 3, but, of course, which squares they go in will depend on the solution of a clue in the other direction. No digit can be repeated in a solution. Answer at redeyechicago.com/puzzles.

Child's play

'Orphan' shows only one side of the well known and parentless

Did someone say creepy?

This weekend, audiences can check in again on that old horror-movie standby: the glassy-eyed, heebie-jeebies kid.

"Orphan," which opened Friday, picks up where movies like "The Exorcist," "Children of the Corn," "The Omen" and countless other spook joints have left off with the story of a seemingly perfect tyke who is not everything she appears to be.

The movie concerns a man and woman who've lost an unborn child and decide to adopt, only to discover that the girl, Esther, is more than meets the eye. You can imagine what happens next.

Of course, not all orphans are hell-raisers. Have a look at the flip side of movie orphans—here are just a few old and new.

ANNIE

She lives!

The bitch is back—Michelle Trachtenberg said she will reprise her role as Georgina Sparks in the upcoming season of “Gossip Girl” even though Trachtenberg has a new NBC show in the works. “Georgina’s not going anywhere,” Trachtenberg told New York magazine.

“She’s never gonna die. There’s nothing you can do to kill her. It’s like one of those horror movies where they’re like, ‘She’s dead,’ and then she wakes back up and is like, ‘No, I’m not.’”

HOT DATE

07/28

RAW TV and Jira Productions presents “The Man from Neverland,” a free musical tribute in honor of Michael Jackson at the Harold Washington Cultural Center. Doors open at 6:30 p.m. The show starts at 8 p.m.

THE VELVET ROPE

Chasing Amy

Amy Winehouse (above) is off the hook. A British judge acquitted the beehived soul diva on Friday of assaulting a fan who asked to take her picture, The Associated Press reports. He found the 25-year-old singer not guilty of punching dancer Sherene Flash in the eye after the fan asked to take her picture following a charity ball in September. GETTY IMAGES PHOTO

Whew!

Don’t panic, Lollapalooza fans. Jane’s Addiction still is scheduled to perform at the Grant Park festival Aug. 7.

On Thursday, the band canceled tour dates that were scheduled for the coming week in Australia, saying drummer Stephen Perkins is receiving treatment for an infected elbow. At press time Friday, Lolla was the only performance listed on Jane’s Addiction’s Web site.

Paris

Mom genes

Talk about an awkward family moment. Paris Hilton’s new documentary airs Tuesday on MTV—and they left in the part about the sex tape. Before the film’s premiere, Hilton’s mom, Kathy, told Entertainment Weekly: “I didn’t know [the sex tape] was going to be in it.... I thought they kept that part out. It’s going to be very hard for us to watch.” Squirm!

Twice as nice

It’s twins! Tennis ace Roger Federer and his wife, Mirka, welcomed Charlene Riva and Myla Rose on Thursday, according to The Associated Press. What a month for Federer—twins and his 15th grand slam title. The question is, will his kids be as good as he is?

Jackson doctor targeted

The personal physician who tried to revive a dying Michael Jackson has been named as the target of a manslaughter probe into the singer’s death, The Associated Press reports.

A search warrant filed Thursday allowed authorities to seek “property or items constituting evidence of the offense of manslaughter that tend to show that Dr. Conrad Murray committed the said criminal offense.”
